Keep Astern.

An amusing incident of the international yacht race was the dipping of a canvas roll with the above sign over the taffrail of the Volunteer just as Thistle crossed her wake. Though unpremeditated, it aroused the enthusiasm and cheered the hearts of the American spectators. Without disrespect to our neighbors it is but right to note that this township has for some years been showing them a clean pair of heels. If there has been no warning to "Keep Astern," it has been due to courtesy rather than fear.

With gas, water, an excellent fire department, good roads and sidewalks our supremacy has been amply maintained. A horse car connection with Newark has long been an accomplished fact. The Orange and Bloomfield Horse car line will now give opportunity to cultivate amicable relations with Orange. At the same time, the Broad street line will give increased accomodations to our own people. For this the capital is ready, awaiting only action of property owners and Town Committee men in giving their consent. A well built line with single track along the east side of Broad street would seem to insure best results with the least injury to public and private property. This is but one of many instances that outsiders are becoming interested in the growth and prosperity of the township. It is not unlikely that before many months other enterprises requiring capital will be undertaken. Meanwhile, private enterprise does not halt. Many elegant residences are now building, and many more are projected. The growth is extensive and spread pretty evenly over the township. New pieces of property are constantly being acquired for immediate improvement. The prices paid for land are low as compared with those secured in adjoining townships, and yet sufficient to repay present owners. Care should be taken to encourage the building of substantial houses. Cheap structures devoid of ornament will not help but may seriously damage the value of adjoining property. Better one or two houses with some claims to architecture than a hundred brick and mortar dry-goods boxes, fit only for tenements or store houses! A conspicuous feature of the present movement in real-estate is its healthful character. Professional builders have had little to do with its progress, while a multitude of small investors have exercised care and good taste in their work.

For many years to come there will not be danger of an excess of medium sized houses. At present the demand is far greater than the supply. Capital can here find profitable and speedy investment. It must however be made with care. In the vicinity of depots, stores, churches and schoolhouses are the more eligable sites for houses to rent. Meanwhile an immense amount of suburban property is awaiting development, and for this the new horse railroad will prove a valuable boon. There is plenty of chance for investors, who are not afraid to look at their neighbors over the taffrail.

Obituary.

Mary Prudence, widow of Samuel Carl, died at her residence Oct. 10th 1887, in the 60th year of her age, after a long illness. She was the daughter of Josiah Crane, deceased, of Montclair, and was born in that place in 1828. In early life she met with a change of heart and united with the M. E. Church at (then) West Bloomfield. After marriage she took up her residence in Bloomfield, where Mr. Carl had started business. She and her husband united with the Park M. E. Church of this place when first organized and always was identified with its interests, working zealously and lovingly for the church of her choice, gladly sacrificing for its advancement. It was a great trial when health failed, to feel compelled to give up her active church work.

She was made a manager of the Bloomfield Orphan Asylum Association in 1854 and was connected with it as a member of the advisory board at the time of her death. She was a member of the Relief Society when in existence and was always charitable and kind, and felt it a privilege to lighten others, burdens. She was a most devoted, loving mother, doing everything possible to make those around her happy. Although an invalid for a long time she bore her confinement with patience, never murmuring.

Her Christian experience was clear and satisfactory, and in death rejoiced greatly in spiritual life, making all arrangements for her funeral, and died in full assurance of her Christian faith. She leaves two sons and one daughter.

What Does He Mean?

To the Bloomfield Citizen:

As the Rev. Father Nardiello has reopened disscussion upon matters relating to the educational problem, it may not be amiss to make a suggestion or two, and, in order to have a definite idea of what we are trying to demolish or establish, to ask and have answered one or two simple questions.

Taking into consideration all mitigating circumstances, the difficulty which our reverend and esteemed friend is forced to meet is, that in attempting to win his audience from the newspaper field, he has naturally expected to enjoy the same immunity from criticism to which he is accustomed when talking from his pulpit platform. When a clergyman is speaking in that place the pews must keep silence. There can, in the fitness of things, be no Emma Abbott to rise up and protest, whatever indignation may be felt. But when a clergyman appeals to an "intelligent public" by offering argumentative battle from the public forum of a newspaper, he should count the cost and be prepared to take blows as well as give them. "Lay on Macduff," and may the best arguments win, should then be his challenge.

In his latest communication the reverend gentleman condenses his opinions as follows: "Secular education, divorced from the religious, leads to crime and infidelity." We fully assent to that, provided we can agree upon a comprehensive, clear, catholic definition of the term "religious." The gist of the whole matter is in that word. What do we understand what does he understand "religion" pure and simple, to mean? Some of us may have a very positive conviction of what it does and does not mean, but as he has first introduced the term, will he kindly and explicitly define it?
